

Comment les récupératrices et récupérateurs de matériaux préviennent
la pollution marine par les déchets

Nous extrayons des matériaux organiques des décharges non revêtues, ce qui empêche les toxines de s'infiltrer dans les eaux souterraines et dans les océans.

Nous fournissons un service de collecte des déchets à faible coût que les gouvernements peuvent se permettre, afin que les communautés les plus démunies puissent également avoir accès à ce service, ce qui contribue à prévenir le déversement non contrôlé.

Nous fournissons des services de collecte qui empêchent l'incinération des déchets à ciel ouvert, qui peut polluer les océans.

Nous collectons des matériaux à recycler et à réutiliser auprès des résident·e·s, des entreprises ou dans la rue et nous évitons ainsi qu'ils ne polluent l'environnement.

En recyclant et en réutilisant les matériaux, nous évitons le besoin de fabriquer de nouveaux matériaux (matières premières vierges), qui peuvent détruire l'environnement.

Nous fournissons de la vaisselle réutilisable pour éviter l'emploi du plastique jetable qui pourrait aboutir dans l'environnement.

Nous faisons pression en faveur de nouvelles politiques pour encourager la participation de toutes et tous dans le recyclage, la réutilisation et la réduction des déchets.

Nous rencontrons les résident·e·s en face à face et travaillons avec elles et eux pour promouvoir de meilleures pratiques de gestion des déchets et pour communiquer de nouvelles initiatives telles que l'interdiction des plastiques à usage unique, etc.

Nous trions et traitons les matériaux recyclables au niveau local pour éviter la pollution lorsqu'ils sont expédiés à l'étranger (où ils pourraient finir dans les océans).

10

Nous nous entraïdons en nous organisant et en apprenant de nouvelles compétences afin de créer une meilleure gestion des déchets non recyclables.
